Farmingville, NY - On January 28, Supervisor Ed Romaine and Councilwoman Connie Kepert joined community leaders, Brookhaven Hospital representatives and elected officials to celebrate the ribbon cutting ceremony of Brookhaven Hospital's Bellport Primary Care Center located in the heart of the greater Bellport community. The center will provide educational and awareness programs with a focus on prevention, especially in the areas of diabetes, hypertension, tobacco cessation, women's health and cardiovascular education.

Supervisor Romaine said, "I commend Brookhaven Memorial Hospital for providing the Bellport community with this state-of-the-art health facility. The education and care programs that will be offered are very beneficial for the residents of the area and I encourage everyone to take advantage of their services."

"This was an effort that came to fruition due to the dedicated and collaborative efforts of the Brookhaven Hospital, leaders in the community and multiple levels of government. We worked hard to identify a location that would offer convenient access to the community and this center achieves that goal," stated Councilwoman Connie Kepert.

The facility will officially be opening their doors in April.
